During school days, or any other days for that matter, parents should be careful how they speak of teachers before children. If there is fault to be found with a teacher by parents, it should be talked in private and not in the hearing of children.

The funeral services of Mr. Martin Meyers will occur Saturday at 2 o'clock at the Lutheran church. The burial services will be held at Oak Hill cemetery. There was a slight mistake in an announcement which stated that the funeral would be held Sunday at 2 o'clock.

Ask some men for an advertisement or a few locals and they will say they don't believe in advertising—a paper is never read. Let one of them be caught kissing his neighbor's wife or struggling along with a jag, and if the printing office is in the garret of a seven-story building he will climb to the top and beg the editor to keep quiet—not to publish it in the paper.—Humboldt (Ia.) Independent.

The agreement was satisfactorily arranged.

The entertainment given in the opera house Friday night by the "Chicago Ladies Military Band" was not as well attended as it probably would have been if there had not been any other exercises going on. But the music rendered was very good. The female "Sousa" did very well. There is still a chance of improvement, though, with them all.

Today is the day when Congress will convene in Washington, and then the country will all be on the look out to see what will be done. THE INDEPENDENT, like it always has, will give the news from our National Capitol. Now is the proper time to have your name entered on the list and receive, not only the home news every evening, but an epitome of the world's news.

Dr. Jackson shipped a surgeons chair to a doctor in southern Texas Friday. This chair has been examined by several of our physicians and they say it answers all purposes for which they need a chair, and some say it is the best low price chair they ever saw. The doctor has devoted considerable time in perfecting this chair and has asked the criticisms of his brother practitioners so he could remedy any faults which he might have overlooked.

Caught the Kitty.

An odorous story comes from the east. A young man whose field of professional labor is not twenty miles from the Pittsburgh road, caught a skunk the other evening. Before starting on the pursuit he failed to classify the little animal properly and pressed the chase by reason of an error in judgment which led him to believe himself in pursuit of some wicked person's deserted kitty. He was undeceived, however, when he was about to lay hands on the skunk and thought for a moment that the concentrated essence of odors had been poured out upon his head. The strictly embarrassing feature of his position was that he had left his best girl in the buggy while he went off on the skunk hunt. As all things end, so did their journey to town, and so has his penchant for catching stray cats.

Cork Screw Club Meets.

Like the Ancient Order of Hoo Hoos, the secret and mysterious order of the Black Cats, the Corkscrew Club of this city is also an order whose secret working is veiled in the profoundest mystery. The Chief High Ritualist is said to appear before the lodge on meeting nights at exactly the dread hour of midnight, when graveyards yawn and give up the spirits of their dead, and to perform such a wierd and altogether hypnotic incantation that the room is filled with enchantment and all are lifted to the seventh stratum of Corkscrew Club delight. This is followed by the introduction of a turkey gobbler who stuts about in the blue ether of the seventh aerial stratum as a perpetual example of the pride to which all members of the club who have been elevated to the seventh plane of Corkscrew Club progression should attain. A half tone reproduction of the turkey gobbler set in a pictured wreath of chrysanthemums and hollyhocks, to denote spring, autumn and Thanksgiving, is worn as the emblem and royal insignia of the club. But little information regarding the inner workings of this club is attainable and we have been unable to learn what manner of corks are drawn by the Corkscrew Club at times of meeting. The club convened at 12 o'clock Saturday night and did not adjourn until 12 o'clock Sunday night. This was a regular convocation. When certain special rites are performed the sessions are said to last from forty-eight to sixty hours.

An Unlucky Thirteen.

Laporte Argus: Those who entertain a superstition about the No 13 being unlucky may be interested in knowing that several years the Lake Shore road has had a No. 13 express train, and as long as it run under that number it never met with the slightest mishap. It was so singularly free from all trouble that it became noted on the road. A short time ago the number was changed and almost immediately accidents began to happen to it and they have since been of frequent occurrence, although none of them have very serious.
